Markus 4:30-32

³⁰Hy het ook gesê: "Hoe sal ons die koninkryk van God voorstel, of met watter gelykenis sal ons dit uitbeeld? ³¹Dit is soos 'n mosterdsaadjie. Wanneer dit in die land geplant word, is dit die kleinste van al die soorte saad daar in die land. ³²Maar as dit eenmaal geplant is, kom dit op en word dit groter as al die tuinplante. Dit kry sulke groot takke dat die voëls in sy skaduwee kom nes maak."

Markus 4:30-32

Dan White Jr. - Subterranean

This parable describes the tree as a shelter for all the birds of the air. This type of shelter is not created with our best ministry artillery and most exciting ministry personalities. There is something untraditional and unsettling about the agronomy that God's kingdom favors. There is a mysterious interplay between the subterranean roots the church cultivates and the expression of a life-giving kingdom tree. There is no tree without roots.

Dan White Jr. - Subterranean

We must wake up to a better way of being the church that is more about anchoring our souls than accruing a status. Jesus compared his work in the world to the most microscopic seeds, like the mustard seed. The future of the church needs a renewed imagination for the sacred smallness of presence as a means for the how the kingdom of God breaks in.

A scenic landscape featuring a large, leafy tree in the foreground, its trunk silhouetted against a bright sunset. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a starburst effect. In the background, a calm body of water reflects the orange and yellow light of the sky. A wooden picnic table sits on a grassy bank to the right. Distant mountains are visible on the horizon under a clear blue sky.

Hoe kry ons dit reg?

A scenic landscape at sunset. In the foreground, a large, dark tree with some autumn-colored leaves stands on a grassy bank. The sun is low on the horizon, partially obscured by the tree's trunk, creating a bright starburst effect. To the right of the tree, a wooden picnic table sits on the grass. In the background, a calm body of water reflects the orange and yellow light of the sunset. Distant mountains are visible on the horizon under a sky with soft, wispy clouds. A semi-transparent dark grey banner is overlaid across the middle of the image, containing the title text.
